INCIDENT ON SITE OF BLAIR ATHOL COAL MINE

An employee of the Blair Athol Coal Mine operated by TerraCom Ltd (ASX: TER) was taken to hospital overnight for precautionary observation after the truck she was operating came into contact with an insulated dragline trailing cable suspended between two cable towers on the site.

The electrical safety system immediately tripped the circuit removing all power and no electricity was discharged. The experienced female operator, a long-term TerraCom employee, sustained no physical injuries and was taken to nearby Clermont Hospital for observation.

A spokesperson for TerraCom said safety is a key value for the mining company and the welfare of workers is paramount. "All correct safety and operational procedures were followed. Our colleague is expected to be released from hospital shortly," the spokesperson said.
